

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and apparatus of forming a microcrystalline thin film comprises supplying a first gas and a second gas into a chamber containing a substrate during a first process, and supplying the second gas but not the first gas into the chamber during a second process. The first and second processes are performed plural times to form the 5 microcrystalline thin film.